On 15th June 1215, King John met with the barons at Runnymede to sign a document that would ensure the freedom of the Church, the liberties of the barons, and make himself equally subject to the law: Magna Carta.

It has become one of the most influential and powerful documents in history, but how real are the liberties it sets out today?

> Freedom of speech

...only where it supports the new dogma

> Freedom of conscience

...only so long as it doesn't infringe countervailing values

> Freedom of belief

...only in private and behind closed doors
